

To whom this may concern:

Hamedah is the type of woman who'd give you the shirt off her back! She always did what she could to help others, whether that meant making sacrifices herself. She's a woman of values, beliefs, wisdom, strength, and class. After meeting her it wouldn't take long to see that. She would be the woman to go to when you need a shoulder to cry on, advice, or someone to talk to. No matter what the situation was she always tried to find a positive outlook. She is an all around good woman.

Growing up she was very funny, sweet, respectful, considerate of other people's feelings, didn't cuss, dutiful, pleasant personality, never criticized, always had something good to say and went to school with no problem and eager to learn. Hamedah has always been intelligent and cared about her education. She was enrolled in job corps and graduated. Even after being incarcerated she still continued to further her education by becoming a paralegal assistant. There were good qualities installed in her and she made sure she installed those same good qualities into her children. She was a caring, loving, dedicated single mother who put her children first. She spent time with her children, always concerned about her schooling and taught responsibility. They were all well behaved and respectful children. She worked to provide her children with all that they needed and some of what they wanted. She wasn't just only a mother to her own children, but to any child she recognized in need. She might not been able to do much, but she did what she could. From providing meals, braiding hair, spending time, to whatever she could do. She couldn't help, but to reach out to others it was in her nature.

If she was to be released from prison she'd come home to a family who'd be right there to offer so much love and support. She'd come home to good working class people, some of us attending college, taking care of our families and just doing the right things in life. She'd have a home to come to, transportation would be provided, resources available, and support and encouragement to succeed in life. This letter has been composed through family and friends of Hamedah Hasan; we are more than ready for her to come home. We all ask that you grant her clemency request.

Sincerely,

Shirley A Skriuk
